Wellington Management bases its exclusions on a combination of internal research and the research of a third-party provider. Exclusions are applied only where the Investment Manager or the third-party exclusion provider has conducted research and identified companies as being involved in the excluded activity. As a result, involvement may occur in these excluded activities where the Investment Manager or the third-party provider does not have coverage.

For categories excluded in relation to the Wellington Management Funds - Exclusion Policy, internal research may be used as an overlay. Some companies may be exempted from the exclusions listed above based on transition activities or commitments identified. Further details on the exclusions related to the Wellington Management Funds - Exclusion Policy are available via www.wellingtonfunds.com/SFDR

Exclusions in relation to Controversial Weapons comprise of companies with any ties to cluster munitions, landmines, biological/chemical weapons, depleted uranium weapons, blinding laser weapons, incendiary weapons, and/or non-detectable fragments.

The Fund applies exclusions to adhere to the Towards Sustainability label accredited to the Fund. The Towards Sustainability Initiative includes a Quality Standard and the Label for sustainable and socially responsible financial products. Some exclusion thresholds may be stricter or superseded by other exclusions adopted by the Fund. Exclusion screening may be applied using data from a third-party exclusion provider, and where the third-party provider does not have coverage, internal research may be used to identify companies as being involved in the excluded activity on a best endeavor basis. As a result, involvement may occur in these excluded activities. For more information about the Towards Sustainability initiative or for a more complete and current list of exclusions as the Quality Standards may further evolve over time, please consult the Febelfin label website at www.towardssustainability.be/en/quality-standard.

The Fund also applies certain exclusions in adherence to the requirements of the ESMA's Guidelines on funds' names using ESG or sustainability-related terms according to the criteria referred to in Article 12(1)(a) to (g) of CDR (EU) 2020/1818 (i.e. the Paris-Aligned Benchmark exclusions) as follows.
Exclusions are applied using data from a third-party exclusion provider, or internal research where the third-party provider does not have coverage. Some exclusions may be superseded by stricter thresholds from other exclusions adopted by the Fund.

The Quality Standards do not permit investment in companies involved in certain activities or revenue thresholds related to the following sector exclusion categories.
